

A thought of the day in passing . . .

~Every concept under the sun pushed to its ultimate conclusion becomes its opposite.~

Religion, for all its excesses and confusions, always, presumably, began with a worthy motive; and still serves a good purpose where it perpetuates the qualities of love, conscience and right behavior, universal good will. But when it takes to itself excessive power, in moving from self rule to rule over others, it begins the decline into its opposites.

~ Politics, being an ideology, could be said to be a religion.~

THE BEST GAME IN TOWN (But not the only dream)

Segment 8

As seen, many world religions and belief systems have come and gone over the ages. Take science for example. If you think on it for a moment, you will observe that science is always being rewritten. Newton's law was once irrefutable but now we reconsider. The world was once 'known' to be flat and now is 'proven' to be round – no, pear shaped, as space photos reveal. Once what everyone 'knew' made you thin, now makes you fat, and the reverse. Milk was healthy for everyone yesterday - today some say no, so too with sugar and meat, wheat . . . and on it goes. The scientific community blithely says, "Well, we have a new thinking on that!" And there goes another belief. Then everyone changes their minds and daily regimen accordingly. Has that never struck you as peculiar? Or, has it occurred to you that nobody seems to 'know' anything? Things are daily being done that 'can't be done'. Nature and Science's accepted laws are the very backbone of the current 'World; Dream'; almost everyone believes in them. Yet, we know there are many holes in the fabric of this reality: unexplained physical phenomena documented in the Bermuda Triangle, parallel but seemingly unconnected global knowledge, the standing stones of Stonehenge, miracles in healing, impossible feats by saints, mystics and yogis, miraculous acts in transcending law by even ordinary folk (such as a mother lifting a car to save her child). Then there are the astounding new findings of quantum physicists -- who finally seem to be agreeing with the mystics. What do we really know? And, what's real?
