AFTER ENLIGHTENMENT, WHAT?

by Tara

Entering the world is like drowning
in a glorious glimmering sea of discontent.

Spilling the beans . . .

In order to function adequately in this world after a profound 'awakening', one must return to duality in some form of a mental construct, even while fully knowing it is a lie or partial truth at best.

Life becomes additionally complicated and difficult if one finds oneself, in one's emptiness, mirroring; taking on the desires and conditioning of others. One must early on learn detachment, or some mechanism for swiftly letting go of energies and conditions picked up - or lose oneself to the world again.

Moreover, in the chaos of life and living, after the initial period of Grace, one's cleared former aspects will also show up. What separates the men from the boys is - will one get caught, and erroneously identifying, trapped in them?
