

A thought of the day in passing . . .

WHAT'S REAL?

So many beliefs
All of them true.

That is, in their time
Of duration,
For the being perceiving.

None of them real.

All competing
For mass adherence,
To give them power, substance,
Validation!

To make them seem actual . . . 'real'.
More real than the others.

Why don't they see,
It's not a matter of who's right or wrong.

It's simply matter of style.

THE BEST GAME IN TOWN
(But not the only dream)

Segment 5

~ Within 'The Great Dream' is playing 'The Ultimate Contest'. ~

Getting to the crux of the matter; each philosophy, every religion and scientific theory is training the people in the dream from birth, (or as soon as they can get hold of them) in a way to live their lives for health, happiness, truth, salvation, enlightenment and/or liberation. (Nevermind for the moment whether the leaders themselves are asleep or awake.) Each is based on a model of the universe with a pretended or believed reality. A dream these followers usually never wake up from. Dreams they will invest the only life they know exists in. Each of these is a personal cosmology and ideology that undertakes to explain who we are, where we will go when we end, and what we must do to get the most of it all while here. Some ideologies are simple and others exceedingly complex, lasting innumerable lifetimes and covering the cosmos and spiritual worlds from the beginning to the end of time, and none of them agree – and all the while, believing theirs to be the only real one, or at least the most right and true. With all these possibilities, what makes it all work? You might well ask. What is the real truth? There is none. And, they're all true -- 'relatively' true.
