

A thought of the day in passing . . .

Don't judge people by their covers!

People are uncomfortable with 'different', be it themselves, other people, the actions of people, the beliefs of people. It is an insecurity. A little different is okay, even desirable, too much so, is a threat. To feel alright people in general need agreement, they check themselves against others to be sure they are 'alright' enough, part of the flock and their chosen beliefs are really correct, while yet needing to feel special, unique. This comes from a deep seated knowledge that we are not real or true; we are fleeting façades and cannot possibly know anything for certain, not even ourselves. But we keep trying . . . perhaps that's why we're here. Nothing here is certain but that only in our source condition, our God Self, are we real and fully whole. (This will be brought into clearer focus further into this work.)

June 21 Day 9

By Tara, all rights reserved by Bhagavan Fdn.

ENLIGHTENMENT

The book; ENLIGHTENMENT, will be reprinted page by page daily on this site free and in full. For the less patient, the book may be purchased in full from BookStore.

ENLIGHTENMENT

by Tara

EGOLESSNESS

Who am I,
I ask my inner I?
God,
Came the reply.
Blasphemy!
No,
Infinite Modesty.
God is All There Is.
Who am I to think I am,
A thing different?

Juen 21 , 2009 Day 9

From the book; ENLIGHTENMENT, all rights reserved by Bhagavan Fdn.